COP and post-COP: Climate change law in and after Paris

Thursday 21 January 2016

4:30 – 8:00pm

London (Six Pump Court)

In December 2015, the international community has met in Paris for a climate summit that many experts considered to be the last opportunity to avoid catastrophic climate change. The Paris Agreement has been hailed by many as a historical landmark and the French Presidency labelled it as universal, fair and legally binding. Against that background, this high-level event will take place just over one month after the conclusion of the Paris summit and will allow timely reflection on its outcomes. The event will feature a distinguished group of experts who attended the Paris Conference. The event is organised by Six Pump Court in collaboration with the Strathclyde Centre for Environmental Law and Governance and the London Centre for International Law Practice.

Founded in the 1920s as a specialist criminal, civil and family set, Six Pump Court has evolved into one of the strongest sets in environmental/planning, health and safety and all forms of regulatory law. Chambers has a reputed breadth and depth of knowledge of environmental law both at the senior at junior level, and handles everything from major emission scheme cases to environmental nuisance and permitting matters

The London Centre of International Law Practice (LCILP) is a unique institution located in the heart of London; comprising high-level professional international law practitioners, dedicated to the advancement of global legal knowledge and the practice of international law. We offer specialised legal training programmes, law policy advice, and technical assistance with legal issues, including assembling research and publications. We organise conferences and meetings on pressing international law issues. Our consultants are renowned international practitioners in the public and private sectors across a range of legal disciplines and they provide a wealth of expertise, extensive knowledge and experience in international law, international relations, dispute resolution and geopolitics.

The Strathclyde Centre for Environmental Law and Governance (SCELG) was established in 2013 as a centre of academic excellence in environmental law and governance. The goal of the Centre and of its members is to foster multidisciplinary and policy relevant research in International, European and national (both Scottish and English) environmental law. SCELG also operates as a hub for excellence in PhD and postgraduate teaching programmes in environmental law and governance within the School of Law. It hosts a Visiting Researcher Programme and welcomes consultancy collaborations with public and private policy makers and stakeholders. SCELG organises a wide range of events, including high-profile guest lectures, seminars and conferences. It collaborates closely with the other Centres within the School of Law (Centre for the Study of Human Rights Law, Centre for Law, Crime and Justice and the Centre for Internet Law and Policy) and with Centres and Institutes across the University.
